Critical Korean Issue Before UN

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—(P)—The United States and five other countries today formally asked, the United Nations Assembly to take up as urgent matter the Chinese Communist intervention in Korea.

The request was made in a telegram to UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie. Diplomatic quarters said it might be taken up by the Assembly's 14-nation steering committee either today or Tuesday.

To Steering Committee.
Under Assembly rules, the question first must go to the steering committee. If this body recommends its inclusion in the aganda, it then goes before a plenary meeting of the assembly. A two-thirds majority of the Assembly itself is required to put the issue on the work sheet for a full airing.
Diplomats were waiting to learn the results, if any, from a secret conference last night between India's Sir Benegal N. Rau and Communist China's Wu Hsiu-Chuan. Sir Benegal said their session of several hours was designed to find a peaceful solution of the crisis. It is highly unlikely that the nature of the discussions will be made public until:

1. Wu and Rau have communicated with their respective government and given them a chance to ponder the vlews expressed.

2. President Truman and British Prime Minister Attlee, meeting in Washington have had a chance to study the results—if any—and destudy the results—if any—and de-study the results—if any—and decide on a common policy.

It was Rau's second meeting in three days with Wu. Cautious optimism developed here that some fruitful suggestion could result and might lead to a diplomatic so lution of the Korean problem.

Diplomats were especially cheered by the fact that, following the first conference, Wu evidently received approval from Peiping to go ahead with negotiations.

There was no indication what line the talks were taking, but there was considerable speculation that a military ocase-fire might be arranged which would give time for a political settlement.

Rau is expected to meet Wu.

Is Soil Getting Better Or Worse? Answer Shown In Farm Efficiency By CLYDE JOHNSON | And, perhaps there'd be less in the farmer's pantry.

so. It reports closing ten of its plants in the state because farmers couldn't produce sufficient volume to keep them in production.

Poor pasture land was blamed.

Acutally, though, farmers are producing more—with fewer hours of labor—than ever before.

Could this efficiency be achieved with the soil growing "poorer and poorer?"

A farmer is a lot like a sodajerk. He can produce a good product or a bad one. The ingredients jerk. He can produce a good product, or a bad one. The ingredients are the same. It's how they are compiled—tho creator's ability—that counts.

Farmer Is Taught

In recent years soil depletion has threatened the nation's health and welfare. Something had to be done.

welfarc. Something had to be done. But the farmer was like the bad soda-jerk. He had to be taught a few things. And Uncle Sam has done most of this. Costly, but seemingly necessary.

A production-yield (per acre) graph, prepared by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, reveals a sharp and steady rise since 1932. This goes for livestock, too. Production per breeding unit has risen rapidly in the last 16 to 18 years.

And 1951's beef output is expected to be 1,000,000,000,000,000 for some state of the control of the service clubs meet in the Navarro Hotel at noon. Several landlords in the community are slated to be guests at the two programs.

Mrs.G.H.MAdams

And 1951's beef output is expected to be 1,000,000,000 pounds greater than that for this year, due to larger feed crops.

"Output of farm products for human use is now 70 per cent greater than before World War I. while the time, spent at farm work is 15 per cent less.

"This means that production per hour of farm work has doubled in less than 40 years, with about half of the gain coming in the last decade."

Soil Better

Soil Better

The soil must be getting better and better. There's plenty proof of this in Navarro county.

If soil were getting poorer, the entire agricultural conservation program would be a failure. There would be barren fields in the winter; tankless, terraceless farms, and scrawny cattle on grassless, eroded pastures.

Is Texas soil really becoming poorer and poorer?
A national food company thinks so. It reports closing ten of its plants in the state because farmers couldn't produce sufficient volume to keep them in production. Poor pasture land was blamed.

And, perhaps there'd be less food in the less food in the farmer's pantry.

The soil conservation program isn't solved by a long shot. Much remains to be done, but the work is progressing well, particularly in Navarro county. And much wornout, depleted soil has been revitalized by farmers who have grasped a modern "know how."

The first step was taken by congress last September when it increased income taxes. It may boost them again next year and also slap on some excise, or sales, taxes and increase corporation levies.

The need for additional revenue was underscored last Friday when President Truman asked congress for an emergency $17,850,000,000 appropriation for national defense. As a preliminary to his talks with the British prime minister. President Truman held a week end series of conferences with top military and diplomatic lleutenants and congressional leaders. The president prepared himself for the talks in the extraordinary round of conferences. These began Saturday night, continued through Sunday and were expected to go on until the scheduled first session between Truman and Attlee.

Key legislators of both parties were given a separate briefing.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(A7)—Nervous selling spurred by the crucial international situation knocked down grain prices on the Board of Trade today.
Only once during the day did the market show real rallying ability. That came during the first half hour when grains recovered from a selledl in the opening minutes. But the rally stopped dead.

Traders felt that a general war, carrying with it the possibility of Russia's our unminute western Europe, evoked the prospect of killing off potential export markets.

New York Futures Weak

NEW YORK, Dec 4.—(P)—The cotton futures market was weak today, with extreme losses ranging to $5.10 a bale. While a post opening rally elimited about one half of early losses, the recovery was shortlived. Heavy general selling came into the market as a result of uncertainty over price controls and unfavorable Korean war news.

Dealers said that distant contracts of cotton futures were subject to heavy selling because if price controls were imposed they would not affect new crop months.

Late afternoon prices were $1 to $4.45 a bale lower than the previous close.

Before the entrance of the bridal party Mrs. Collin Hanna sang, "At Dawning," with Mrs. S. K. Brietz accompanying at the organ. Mrs. Hanna sang, "The Lord's Prayer," as a concluding prayer song and Mrs. Brietz played the traditional marches and wedding prelude.

Ivory plume mums were massed in a fan arrangement as a background for the exchange of vows, repeated before a background of Woodwardia palms and myriad tapers in golden floor candelabra. Massive altar candles framed the price-dieux where the nuptial couple knelt.

The bride, who entered with her father, wore a Perisian adaptation of filmy tulle and gold-spot ivery lace. An oval-yoked capelet of lace edged with scallops covered the strapless, heart-shaped bodice of gilded lace. A triple skirt of drifting tulle over taffeta was gathered to the pointed bodice and swept to a tiny train.

The bride's closely fitted helmet of lace framed her face with wide scallops, and shoulder veil of imported illusion was caught to the back of the cap. She carried a bouquet of ivory gardenias and bouvardia with poufs of tulle.
